WITHOUT attempting any oratorical barrel rolls, side slips or Immelmans, we want you Minnesota players and the hundreds of Gopher followers who came by rail and road to know that Nebraska has donned the button shoes, parted the hair right down the middle and rehabilitated the best bib and tucker for this occasion. It's happy we are that we can entertain Minnesota and its Golden Gophers whose record last season will stand in intercollegiate circles as long as football is played.

The series between Minnesota and Nebraska has tradition clinging to it like ivy. Ask those stalwarts of 1900, the "naughty-naughts", if you will, who inaugurated the games between these two fine schools. Thirty five years ago it was and some of the men who participated still look at those contests as the highlights of their collegiate careers.

Now we are moving into a modern series which began in 1932, skipped a year but was resumed last fall and has promise of continuing as long as Bernie Bierman and Frank McCormick are in charge of schedule making at Minneapolis and D. X. Bible retains the reins in Lincoln. Which, to a lay observer, will be a long, long time. Whereupon we give voice to three hallelujahs. It can't be too long to suit us.

It doesn't require words, which at their best are weak and ineffectual methods of expressin, to tell you that you are welcome today. Have a look around you. You see gathered one of the greatest crowds in Nebraska's football history. That tells many times over how high the Golden Gophers are held in the respect of this commonwealth. We aren't going thru the motions of presenting the keys to the city. When we heard that all you folk were coming, we removed the locks. You won't need any keys.

It's been a long time you see insofar as Minnesota's visits to Lincoln are concerned. The last was in 1913 when the Cornhuskers won one of the few games which we have taken from your modern Vikings of the North. A record crowd for those days, 5,500, turned out for the game.

You'll pardon our justifiable pride in this victory. The Cornhuskers were so elated that the spot of earth, where Gordon Beck touched the ball behind the Minnesota goal line to score the touchdown of the game, has been preserved and is now a part of the Cornhusker trophy trove. Beck took a pass from Max Towle that afternoon and manged to out run Clark Shaughnessy, who was here just the other day with his Chicago Maroons.

They didn't call it whoopee in 1913 but a rose by any other name is just as sweet and you should have seen our town when the rooters got thru with it the night after that battle. Probably a bit like Minneapolis last fall after the Minnesota-Michigan game.

When the Cornhuskers complete this afternoon's chores and should they come out ahead in the number of points scored, run—don't walk—to the nearest cyclone cellar and batten down the hatches.

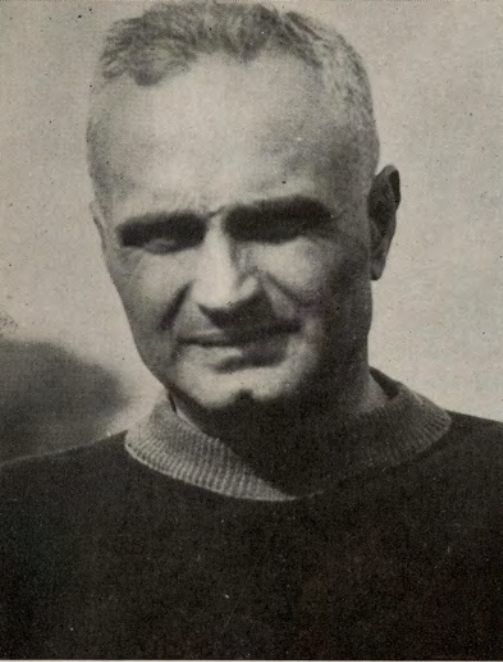

Our Cornhuskers came close to tripping your Gophers the first year Bernie Bierman had charge. That was in 1932 and the score was 7 to 6. Then came 1934 and that "last half rock crusher" headed by Pug Lund, Stan Kostka, et al. Quite a few of those players will be missed from the lineup today and it might be added that the Huskers will miss 'em like a baldheaded man misses flytime. Those of us who have hair found Lund, Kostka, W. Bevan and others constantly getting into it. We can still see Guard Bevan grabbing that Husker flat pass as the first half was ending and waddling to a touchdown, something that guards dream about but rarely accomplish.

Likewise we can recall those bull like rushes of Stan Kostka, on one of which he burst thru the middle and kept right on going for 44 yards to a touchdown. Those sights are burned right clearly into our memory but there were some incidents at which our inveterate pointers with pride still cock the forefinger.

Remember Lloyd Cardwell's 47 yard return of a kickoff when but one Minnesotan was between Lloyd and the promised land? That was a thrill for our side. Likewise, the manner in which the Cornhuskers staved off those first half touchdowns when they were backed up against their own goal line most of the time.

Well, Graham, the show's going to be different today. We want you Minnesotans to know that we appreciate having you with us. We're proud of the chance to meet your teams in practically all of the intercollegiate sports on the calendar, basketball, track, baseball and all the rest. That baseball team you sent down last spring could have been turned into quite a formidable football team and their success in winning the Big Ten baseball title indicated they had plenty of ability in the diamond sport.

Our congratulations for your fine year in all sports in 1934, and to your great coach, Bernie Bierman, especially for his undefeated team and his election as president of the American Football coaches association. We hate to spoil things for your 1935 football season, but you know how it is, and after all we're entitled to win one once in awhile.

Drippings From the Dope Bucket

By GREGG McBRIDE

TURNING THE PAGES—Nebraska and Minnesota have met on the gridiron 16 times and during the series the Cornhuskers have won two victories and the Gophers have triumphed a dozen times, two of the contests resulted in ties. . . . The first meeting was in 1900 and the scene was Lincoln where 5,000 saw a great Minnesota team win 20-12, the Scarlet gaining some solace in the fact the 12 points represented the largest score made against Minnesota during that season. . . . The '00 game was a Turkey day affair and Pillsbury faked a punt and ran 65 yards for one Nebraska score and plunged 12 yards for the other. Hoyt scored two Minnesota touchdowns and Aune counted the other. Minnesota fans ran a special to the game and W. J. Bryan attended. . . . When called upon for a speech before the game, Bryan came up with the diplomatic expression. . . . The Commoner said "You Nebraska Can Conquer" and then told the rival rooters to punctuate it anyway they saw fit. . . . Two special trains carried 2,500 Nebraska rooters to the 1901 game and although Minnesota didn't score until the last two minutes of the first half the final score read 19-0. . . . The "gate" was less than $5,000 as Nebraska beat Minnesota, 6-0, before a crowd of 6,000 at Minneapolis in 1902. . . . Bender went around end to score standing up and Benedict kicked the goal as the Huskers won in the last few minutes of play. . . . So enthusiastic were the home folks that when they heard the good news they promptly took possession of a "mule car". . . . Bender ran 70 yards to a touchdown but this wasn't enough to keep Nebraska from being defeated 16-12 at Minneapolis in 1904, Tackle Vita counted two of the Gopher scores while a crowd of 12,000 loomed on. . . . When Minnesota walloped the Cornhuskers 35-0 in 1905, a Lincoln writer scribbled "Nebraska couldn't beat a pair of deuces" . . . Terrific line smashing helped Minnesota win 3-0 in 1906. . . . The Gophers won 8-5 in 1907 and Minnesota rooters declared the '08 scoreless tie game hardest on Northrop field since Minneapolis-Michigan battle of '03. . . . Omaha was the scene of the 1909 game and Minnesota scored twice in the last half to win 14-0 with McGovern and Johnson as the Gopher stars. . . . McGovern kicked two field goals to help Minnesota win 27-0 in 1910. . . . Owen Frank's dropkick from the 28-yard line just before the game ended was the only Nebraska scoring in that 21-3 game of 1911. . . . Minnesota won 13-0 in 1912 but Nebraskans got plenty opportunity to cheer when the Cornhuskers won, 7-0, in 1913 at Lincoln. . . . Max Towle faked a pass to Mastin and then threw to Gordon Beck for the winning touchdown. . . . Beck took the low pass about a foot off the ground and shook loose one tackler and staggered into three others, stumbling across the goal line. . . when the pile was cleared the ball 6 inches over. . . The 1919 game at Minneapolis resulted in a 6-6 tie score, Schellenberg scoring for Nebraska and Haertel for Minnesota. . . . Manders picked up a loose lateral and ran to the touchdown which beat the Huskers, 7-6, in '32. . . . A great Minnesota team walloped Nebraska, 20-0, and then went on to win the national championship last season.

WIN BIG SIX OPENER—Nebraska sailed away to a winning start in the Big Six conference race last Saturday by winning 20-7 over Iowa State at Ames. Following today's game with Minnesota, the Cornhuskers will meet the other Big Six opponents before resuming play with non-conference foes.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO MANHATTAN — The next assignment on the Nebraska football book is Kansas State at Manhattan. The Wildcats beat the Huskers for the title last year and a special train will carry rooters to Aggieville, as usual. The band and frosh gridders will be in the party.

The next home game is with the University of Oklahoma, Oct. 26. The sooners are coached this year by "Biff" Jones, former Army mentor.

WRITTEN ON THE CUFF—When Lloyd Cardwell raced a kickoff back 86 yards against the University of Chicago in the opening game, he was the first Nebraskan to chase back a kickoff since Clair Sloan returned one 90 yards as the Huskers beat Kansas, 47-12, in 1927. . . . Cardwell with his three touchdowns against the Maroons is the fourth Nebraskan to score three or more touchdowns in a game since Dave Noble crossed the Iowa State goal line three times in 1922. Glen Presnell scored four against Grinnell in 1907, "Red" Young tallied three times against Iowa State in '29 and Everett Kreizinger scored four touchdowns against South Dakota in 1931. . . . Varsity basketball players have been engaging in informal workout preparatory to the start of the 1935-36 cage campaign. . . . There is no knothole section in the stadium today.

John K. Selleck

Veteran business manager of athletics and of student activities at the University of Nebraska. Among his many duties is the task of "seating everybody on the 50-yard line."

Harold G. Petz

Director of intramural athletics at the University of Nebraska. His work also includes announcing football to fans at Memorial stadium and assisting Coach Schulte in track.

What About The Rest?

THE University of Nebraska provides a program of sports designed to meet the needs of that large number of students who do not take part in "Varsity" athletics due to lack of time, ability, or inclination. It is admitted that football and other intercollegiate sports include only a small part of the students and a separate program of Intramural Athletics is set up to meet their needs and to give them in a smaller way the benefits that are to be enjoyed from taking part in competitive games. The object of the program is to furnish that vast number of students with healthful, recreative activity, exercise, social contacts and to develop a feeling of good sportsmanship among the contestants. The program aims to be of such a nature as to enable any student to find one or several activities to his particular liking. The stress of shorter working hours in our present life increases the amount of leisure time and a major purpose of Intramural Athletics is to educate students in sports and games so as to be better able to use this leisure time in a healthful recreative manner. It is for this and other reasons that the stress is placed upon sports that have a "carry-over" value or activities that can be enjoyed by the adult when he is seeking to occupy his mind and body in exercise and play. While it is true that certain rugged sports that require intensive training are necessary to the program, the greater emphasis is on activities that can be enjoyed spontaneously and without any considerable amount of preparation. It is necessary to have a definite organization to conduct the program but the organization should never be so intense so as to crowd out the fun and joy of participation.

The opportunity to meet individuals of one's own age; to contact people of similar purpose and ideals is one of the most valuable experiences that a student gains in his school life. On the athletic field this mingling is carried on under conditions that reproduce adult social and competitive life in many phases. Such experience in group relations helps to give the individual a broader viewpoint, to make him a better judge of the character of his associates and will give him some concrete evidence for making a self-evaluation.

Group cooperation is very necessary in intramural competition and the value of this training in school life will prove to be most helpful in preparing the individual for a successful career in his chosen vocation. The fact that one must sacrifice personal interest and gain for the mutual benefit of the group is symbolic of the patriotism of a citizen to the state and nation and therefore is a worth-while attitude to be cultivated among our growing youth.

It is these and other valuable objectives that intramural athletics aim to meet. It is hoped to be of such a nature as to be attractive to all and that every student will avail himself of the opportunity to be a part and connected with an enterprise that is trying to fill the needs and desires of the great mass of students who do not come before the public eye and who, in many cases, perhaps are more in need of the benefits of exercise and recreation than those who perform on the various teams and groups representing the institution against other schools.
